We also make our own pizza sauce and pizza toppings to top the pizza. The rest is up to you! one thing that ive become convinced is really significant, and may account for lots of beginners having weak batches that barely set up, is using a blender. yes, it does create some foam, which isnt ideal. and the first time you make yogurt youre guaranteed to make a mess of your kitchen counter. but if you dont blend it, and just stir or even shake it up with the lid on, i think you dont properly disperse that dollop of starter evenly throughout the quart of milk. i think its the dispersing effect of the blender thats critical. just my theory, but ive never made yogurt i liked without a blender. If you are going to go through the level, make sure to start from the lessons in the Lessons tab in the lesson's page. Here you'll find all the lessons already structured for easier navigation. As for tutorials, the lessons usually start by covering the content in a Brief Intro and then cover all the necessary skills for the lesson. The next step after the lesson is the Lesson Audio where I'll show you the specific skills covered in each lesson. Also, there are Lesson References and Lesson Notes sections too. This is the place where I'll leave explanations for the most common mistakes or shortcuts that you might encounter. I hope you find them useful!
